"Volunteer Your Art Out"
March 2017, Spotlight Organization, Montgomery Volunteer Center

What we do

Inclusive Theatre Companies (ITCs)

- Who: Adult actors with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) — including autism — and other social and behavioral needs.
- What: Write and perform our own musicals based on actors’ ideas.
- Where: Arlington, Virginia; Gaithersburg and Silver Spring, Maryland.
- Why: Tell our stories, show our talents, show others what’s possible.

Inclusive Drama and Social Skills Classes

- Who: Adults and children with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) — including autism — and other social and behavioral needs.
- What: Teach communication and social skills through the performing arts, including party skills, self-advocacy, public speaking, and pre-employment skills. Class topics include Broadway song and dance, creating your own choreography, puppetry, improvisation, and Shakespeare.
- Where: Arlington, Fairfax, and Oakton in Virginia; Gaithersburg, Germantown, Kensington, North Bethesda, Rockville, Silver Spring, and Westminster in Maryland.
- Why: Practice skills, make new friends, learn to be our “Best Self.”

Military Hospital Programs

- Who: Patients, families, nurses, medics, and technicians at Walter Reed National Military Medical Center (WRNMMC).
- What: A team consisting of a musician, a storyteller, a creative writer, and a visual artist visit the hospital to bring the arts to patients in their rooms and to hospital staff through arts and crafts projects and drama exercises.
- Where: Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda, Maryland.
- Why: Uplift, engage creatively, encourage friendships, build resilience.

Volunteers

ArtStream’s programs are staffed with paid teaching artists and volunteers. Volunteers help to keep actors on task. They also lead small groups and give one-on-one attention to actors.

Many volunteers are inspired by working with ArtStream and pursue careers in disability, performing arts, psychology, and behavioral therapy.

Inclusive Theatre Companies write and perform original musicals. The companies feature adult actors with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) — including autism — and other social and behavioral needs. Actors, volunteer mentors, and theatre professionals work as a team. Together they vote on a theme, create their own characters, and improvise scenes. Those improvised scenes are scripted to become a musical that shows everyone’s talents!

ArtStream offers sign-interpreted performances, accessible seating, and large-print programs at all performance locations in 2016-2017. ArtStream also holds post-show talk backs with the actors at each performance location. At a talk back, the audience can ask the actors and directors about the show.

What does "inclusive" mean?

When programs are "inclusive," people with and without disabilities interact and learn together. Everyone learns from one another, and all contribute new ideas. That is why "inclusive" participation matters.

ArtStream teaches social and communication skills in inclusive classes designed for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) — including autism — and other social and behavioral needs. Classes build skills that can be applied to many parts of life: from the stage, to the family dinner table, to the workplace. Class subjects may include Shakespeare, music theatre, improvisation, public speaking, role-play, party dancing, social skills, etc.

ArtStream classes teach communication skills that can be used on the job or when trying to get a job.

When you learn how to act, you can play your "Best-self" in a job interview. You can communicate with your supervisor the same way you communicate with your scene partner. Actors work together to finish a project — like a Shakespeare scene — the same way you work as a team on the job.
Patients, their families, and caregivers at WRNMMC connect and heal through participating in bedside and group arts sessions. Through “Allies in the Arts” (designed for patients and families) and “You Are a Work of Art” (designed for nurses, medics, and technicians), ArtStream arts-in-healthcare professionals provide sessions focused on music, creative writing, visual arts, and improvisational expression. Sessions are designed to give participants a feeling of creativity, resilience, and community in the hospital setting.

Green Road Project
ArtStream is collaborating with The Institute for Integrative Health on the Green Road Project, a nature trail at WRNMMC that provides a healing environment for injured service members and their families.

ArtStream’s You Are a Work of Art project is helping to create a space on the Green Road for nurses, medics, and technicians at the hospital, filled with opportunities to create and enjoy art.

How does art build resilience?
People who work at WRNMMC work long hours in demanding jobs.

Participating with ArtStream gives nurses, medics and technicians at the hospital a chance to look at things in a new way, to see the color, the beauty, and the rhythm.

Making art can be a form of self-care in the hospital. Nurses reflect on their values to create a piece of art and share it with co-workers and friends.

These connections create a community that will provide strength when they need it most in demanding and vital positions.
What do we learn through the arts?

Performing skills are real-life skills. Here are just a few examples, ideas, and quotes about how ArtStream and learning through the arts makes a difference.

If I tell my classmates "good job" after an activity, they can go from doing a good job to doing a great job.

- ArtStreamer since 2016

More ArtStreamers felt positive about their communication skills at the end of the classes compared to at the beginning.

Sample Exercise: Parts of a stage

Actors use stage directions (grid below) to understand where they are going. Introduce this idea by setting up a "stage" in the classroom. Direct small groups of actors to go to different parts of the stage.

Once they get the idea, invite one of the actors to direct the next group. Actors practice spatial awareness, learn to work together, and get to try directing their classmates.
Performing makes these skills fun and gives you a reason to practice and get better. When you are performing, you are allowed to get things wrong and try again. You can work hard and get better every time you try.

Top 7 reasons it’s easy to make friends at ArtStream:

1. Classes with mixed abilities mean you can always find someone like you!
2. Positive exercises + Positive people = Positive friends
3. You can learn about what other people are interested in.
4. You meet with the same group every week.
5. When you’re being creative, it is easy to relax.
6. Actors learn to trust each other.
7. You’re all working toward the same goal.

Hexagon - Washington's only original political, satirical, musical comedy revue - donated the profits from their 2017 show, Let Freedom Zing! to ArtStream.

ArtStreamers worked as ushers, greeted patrons to tell them about ArtStream, and even made cameo appearances in the performance!

ArtStreamer Kelly DeRoy accepted the donation of $30,000 at the final performance.

Strategic Planning

Thank you to the 76 family members, participants, teaching artists, and volunteers who completed ArtStream's Strategic Planning Survey in January 2017. The Board of Directors and Staff are grateful for your input.

Inclusive Creative Fun Supportive

Priorities 2017-2019

- Improve and Expand Programs
- Community Building
- Growth
- Strengthen our Organization

Among many Strategic Plan Priorities, ArtStream already created more opportunities for people to perform — the Cabaret Company! The Cabaret Company started in fall 2017 to feature actors’ original ideas in a variety show format, performing February 12 and June 4, 2018 at AMP by Strathmore in North Bethesda, Maryland.

ArtStream gives me a place to express myself with my friends and my family. It gives me a voice.
